MAIN CONCEPT NOW

THESE STUDIES DO suggest that a person who has a high level of self-esteem is more likely to be successful in life. But the studies do not prove that a high level of self-esteem is the cause of success. It could be that a person who is successful in life has a high level of self-esteem. Or it could be that a person who has a high level of self-esteem is more likely to be successful in life. The studies do not prove that a high level of self-esteem is the cause of success.

TWO-WHEELED LAWMEN

The Motorcycle Officer's Job Requires a High Degree of Courage and Skill

THE officers making their getaway, headed their speedy car toward the main thoroughfare where the traffic was heaviest. Their object was clear—to prevent the pursuing police cars from catching up by getting as many passing automobiles between their car and the speed car as possible.

For a time, it looked as if their strategy would work. When the squad car turned onto the main thoroughfare, the green-limed police officers found almost 10 other autos between them and their quarry.

At that moment, a police motorcycle raced past the squad car, zig-zagging in and out of traffic, its siren screaming a shrill warning. The motorcycle overtook the getaway car in less than a minute.

Holding his left hand on the handlebars, the motorcycle policeman drew out his gun with the other. This sight was enough to force the getaway car out of traffic and along the curb.

This incident provides dramatic proof of the value of the motorcycle policeman in a big city.

Weighing close to a quarter of a ton, the modern motorcycle is capable of a speed exceeding 100 miles an hour. In some cases the armed motorist, providing a built-in machine gun, protects both the driver and the officer manning the gun.

The motorcycle policeman is the latest descendant of the policeman who once rode a bicycle. Before the advent of the automobile, the bicycle was the fastest thing on the city streets.

Police used the two-wheeler for two purposes. It was used to outpace the horse-drawn vehicles then used by criminals as the automobile is today. It was also used to combat one of the great street perils of that period—the runaway horse. It must have been a thrilling sight to see a "wheel policeman, when a speedy sprint, had himself in the bridle of a frightened horse!

It was the advent of the automobile, with its then high speed of 20 miles an hour, that took the policeman off bicycles and put them on motorcycles.

But the modern wheel-man does not spend all of his time chasing thieves. With his highly maneuverable vehicle, he stands ready to help in any way possible. Typical is the incident which took place in New York City not long ago.

Hospital authorities in New Jersey one afternoon called the Department of Health in New York City to inform it that it needed a quantity of serum to save the life of a child. The Department of Health immediately notified a New York hospital, where the serum was stored, and police headquarters.

A motorcycle officer was instantly dispatched to obtain the waiting package of precious serum and deliver it to a waiting motorcycle officer in New Jersey.

Traffic was at its heaviest. The motorcycle roared through the crowded city streets, its open sash-flap diverting out all other motion except its own own.

Driving with amazing skill, the fireman on wheels sped past parked cars and moving vehicles, leaving scarcely an inch to spare on either side.

Traffic policemen along the way, hearing his warning alarm, directed traffic to one side. On and on sped the cyclist, through heavy traffic which had been stalled to allow him the right of way.

A child's life was at stake!

The two-wheeled vehicle streaked through the action willing to enter the tunnel under the Hudson River, and streaked into the tube without lowering its speed. Minutes later, it was across the river in New Jersey.

There, the precious parcel changed hands. The New York motorcycle passed a moment as he watched his New Jersey brother speed off with a roar. Then he slowly turned his bike around for the homeward trip.

Exactly 12 minutes later a grateful doctor injected the serum into his young patient. And that same night, a smiling New York motorcycle officer learned that the serum that he had raced to another state had saved a life!

The motorcycle, because of its remarkable maneuverability, has been found useful in other ways. During heavy traffic hours, motorcycle policemen park their vehicles and take over the direction of traffic. When large crowds congregate for such outdoor events as parades, the job of keeping back the passing crowd is shared by the patrolman on wheels with the patrolman on horse.

Although there is an element of danger in motorcycle duty, it is regarded by patrolmen as an exciting and glamorous branch of police duty. But the tests to applicants are severe.

Before a patrolman is even considered for wheel duty, he must pass mechanical and temperamental tests, as well as the usual stiff physical examination. For this is a job that requires a high degree of courage and daring—and only the fittest are invited to join the "motor-cycle" platoons of firemen on wheels.

It is not an accident that the Journal of the American Medical Association is the only journal in the world to publish a "Letter to the Editor" section. The Journal has been publishing letters to the editor since 1882, and the letters have been a valuable source of information for the medical profession and the public.

An aerial, high-angle view of a city street intersection. A yellow taxi is positioned in the center of the frame, facing away from the viewer. To its right, a red car is visible. The street is paved with light-colored material, and there are various urban structures and vehicles in the background.
